Indoor visitors are required to wear face coverings if they are physically able to do so, and masks are strongly recommended for history walk participants. Disposable masks are available at the museum, as supplies last (donations are greatly appreciated to help offset costs of providing this service). We also encourage visitors to take advantage of our hand sanitizing station and/or restroom for hand washing before and after the tour. We ask all museum patrons to follow social distance guidelines by standing 6 feet apart from individuals not in their immediate familial or familiar group. Visitors who do not follow our safety protocols may be refused service and asked to leave.

Annual Meeting on Wednesday, July 8th

Last chance to register for the Virtual Annual Meeting! The meeting will begin at 6:00 p.m. with a welcome, then right to business approving minutes and reports, electing new trustees, and saying goodbye to outgoing trustees. Our keynote speaker is Professor Amy Margaris, who has adapted her presentation about the now-gone "Oberlin Museum" into a virtual illustrated presentation. After a brief Q&A session, we will take a minute to convey the most recent news of the Heritage Center before bidding you all a lovely evening. For additional information on the specifics, visit our event page.

How do I register?

If you registered for the April meeting, you will need to register again to attend. Please click this link to register for the free meeting or email Bethany Hobbs at ohcbiz@oberlinheritage.org with a list of who will be "attending" that night. ## Interns Arrive!

Jacob Selent

Natalie Brennecke

Alex Shaver

Jacob Selent is a graduate of Firelands High School and attends Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, where he is studying Classical Humanities, German, and History. Jacob plans to apply for a Fulbright teaching position in Germany after graduation. After Fulbright, he would like to pursue a Master's in History either in Europe or in the United States. "I chose the Oberlin Heritage Center because I wanted to be involved with history on a local level. I am currently working on a feature about John Mercer Langston, who was an abolitionist, politician and diplomat," Jacob said. "Some of my hobbies include playing video games and working on cars. I am involved in Miami's Model United Nation chapter." He also taught German as a foreign language at a local elementary school in Oxford, Ohio during the Spring semester.

Alex Shaver is from Mentor, Ohio and attends Cleveland State University, majoring in Art History/Museum Studies. "I would love to do something with collections management, or grant writing for non-profit organizations," Alex said when asked about future plans. "I have volunteered here before, and it really left an impact on me. Oberlin has a very dynamic history and it is very interesting to learn about." Alex is researching and gathering information about monuments and memorials in Oberlin that will be added to the OHC website, as well as working on updating the object inventories of the Monroe House, Jewett House, and the Little Red Schoolhouse. Plus learning how to give tours! In what little spare time is available, he is visiting museums and he likes to play golf as the game is a good excuse to go outside and get exercise.

Natalie Brennecke is from Oberlin, and will begin her freshman year at the Cleveland Institute of Music as a Viola Performance Major. "After graduating college, I would love to become a music teacher, and possibly play in an orchestra," said Natalie. But her early interest was to be a history teacher, and the Oberlin Heritage Center Junior Internship seemed like a great way to further her knowledge about history and Oberlin in general. She is working on a research project about the Burrell-King House on East College Street, and also helping guide tours and assist with summer camps. Natalie also enjoys reading, sewing, crocheting, knitting, and quilting.

History Minute

Oberlin College student Ella Murray created an online exhibit about the Shule Ya Kujitambua school in Oberlin, which was active in the 1970s and created in reaction to the public school system not addressing the needs of African American students. The website includes a historical overview, images, newspaper articles, and audio clips with founder Kofi Lomotey as well as school attendees and parents. Visitors can navigate the site using the list/table of content icon. Link: <http://scalar.oberlincollegelibrary.org/syk/index>

Campers will uncover forms of human creation through exploring historic tradespeople, meeting craftspeople, and participating in hands-on activities. Folkways that will be explored include basketry, carpentry, cooking, fiber arts, ceramics, and more!

The Folk Camp will offer in-person hours Monday, Wednesday, & Friday from 9:00am-12:00pm on the Oberlin Heritage Center grounds (73 ½ S. Professor Street). In-person camp days will take place primarily outdoors and there may be occasional walking field trips to locations around town. Children must bring appropriate outdoor attire, sturdy shoes, and a mask each day. A bag lunch and water bottle must also accompany the children every day they come to the museum. Camp is $45 for members; $50 for nonmembers. Please register at
