

Textile Care and Preservation in Your Own Home

Saturday, July 14, 2012

10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

at the Oberlin Depot, 240 S. Main St.

(Overflow parking on the north side of South Street and across South Main/S.R. 58.)

We want to save our family's textile treasures for future generations, but we don't live in museums. Join the Oberlin Heritage Center's Collections Assistant Prue Richards for a day-long workshop to learn techniques to improve and extend the lives of heirloom textiles kept in our own homes. Participants are invited to bring textiles for evaluation and will leave with new knowledge and resources.

Prue Richards has been the Collections Assistant at the Oberlin Heritage Center since January 2000 and volunteered at OHC for many years prior to joining the staff. She is a graduate of Oberlin College and has attended specialized museum and collections training at the Winterthur Institute for the American Decorative Arts in Delaware and at the Campbell Center for Historic Preservation Studies in Illinois. She also has attended seminars offered by the Conservation Center for Art and Historic Artifacts and the American Association of Museums. Prue received the Ohio Association of Historical Societies and Museums Outstanding Individual Achievement Award in 2007.

Fee: $50 ($45 for OHC members) includes box lunch. Pre-registration is required. You may register online at www.oberlinheritage.org or mail in the detachable form below.
