with built-in wood bench. Wood valences situated above the six awning windows stacked three on three, also double as storage shelves. The living quarters consists of three bedrooms, a linen closet, and a full bathroom, which has tile countertops and replacement vinyl flooring. Oak wood graces the floors of the bedrooms, which each have several awning windows. Several small metal-covered plugs indicate that a built-in vacuum system was going to be put into the house. The furnace hangs from the ceiling of the crawl space located below the house, accessed from the garage. The home though rather altered on the inside, only has a few alterations on the exterior including the replacement of the gutters and the original tar and gravel roof, now a heavy roof rolling material.
