This house is an example of an American Foursquare with Craftsman/Arts and Crafts influence. The house contains a full front porch, which has a hip roof. The square supports extend through the wood clapboard of the wall that lines the perimeter of the porch. Below the porch roof, wood clapboard forms arches. Square lattice is situated below the porch. Cement steps and a metal rail lead up to the central entry. The door has wood in the upper half. Continued...

Chalon Fowls was listed in the City Directory as living here in 1890. Fowls was an apiarist (beekeeper) and his apiary was featured in the Oberlin News explaining that it was the third largest in Ohio in 1921. Fowls and his family lived here for over twenty years. The next resident was Clyde Wheeler who was also a honey producer. He married Iona Fowls, a daughter of Chalon Fowls. The Wheeler family lived here from about 1927 to 1942. The other residents of this house include C.E. Wighton. Continued...

and molded wood panels below. To the left and right of the door are one-over-one double hung windows. The second story has two one-over-one double hung windows and the roof has a hip dormer with the same style of windows. The exterior of the house appears was altered and is now clad in c. 1970 vertical boards, rather than the clapboard found at the porch. The east elevation has a door near the center with a window in the upper half and molded wood panels below. A one-over-one double hung window is located to the left and a bay window with one-over-one windows is to the right. At the northeast corner of the house, wood steps lead up to a small back porch, which has a flat roof with square supports. Above the central door is a one-over-one double hung window. Three one-over-one windows are located in the second story, and a hip dormer in the roof has the same style of windows. A carport with a flat roof extends from this elevation. The west elevation has a square, projecting bay near the center of the first story, which has a pair of windows. To the left and right of the bay, on both stories, are one-over-one double hung windows. Another is located in the second story, above the bay. This elevation also has a hip dormer in the attic, with one-over-one double hung windows.

43. History and Significance (Con't)

(c.1956), Lunora Lutz (c.1961), Eugene and Rebecca Presti (c. 1970-1995). According to local historian, Jane Blodgett, the Presti’s are owners of Presti’s Restaurant, which was started by Eugene’s father as a room off a gas station. Eugene expanded the restaurant, and it is currently run by their daughter, Michelle.
