This vernacular ranch is typical of post-World War II housing that appeared across the country. A gabled end faces the main facade, the north elevation. At the right of the facade, a 1/1 double hung window has wood surrounds. At the left, narrow 1/1 double hung windows flank a larger window. These windows, like all the others in the house, also have wood surrounds. The exterior siding is narrow clapboard siding.

This house was built by 1948, according to city directory research. The first owner listed in 1948 was Hue L. Holoway. Hue was listed here with his wife Ruth L. and their five children. The Holoways were an African American family. Hue was one of the Oberlinians scheduled to take a pre-induction exam for the army during WWII. Hue was also a laborer and driver for American Radiator. The current owners are Hue L. and Kathy L. Holoway (this may be Hue L. Holoway, Jr., OHS graduate of 1961).

This house has a modern, two-car, vinyl-sided, front gable garage. The house is situated on a road near the outskirts of town. The street is residential near this house, but becomes increasingly rural as one heads east on the road.
