Francis Newton Rhodes built this house between 1916-1927 (city directory), and lived here with his wife, Mary 'May' E. (Allen), after their wedding in 1923 (Holsworth). They lived here until Francis' death in 1944, and by 1956 Martha A. Schaible had moved in (City Directory). The 1961 city directory shows Walter E. Aschaffenburg and his wife living here with their children, Ruth and Katherine. Ruth went on to own Bead Paradise, a store on West College in Oberlin. Walter was an assistant continued...

A detached, three-car garage is located behind the house. The home and those surrounding it are in good condition.
the porch. The center window in the set is four-over-one, flanked by three-over-one windows. The door is located near the center of the elevation, at the porch, and has windows in the upper half. A six-over-one window with vertical muntins is located to the right of the door. Stone lintels and keystones are situated above the windows and door. The south elevation has a pair of one-over-one windows in the gable. A possible addition at the rear is comprised of wood clapboard. This elevation is mainly obscured by foliage. The north elevation has a pair of square windows with vertical muntins towards the left side of the elevation. Four-over-one windows flank the pair of windows. A smaller pair of four-over-one windows is located right of center, with another large pair of windows to the far right. The gable contains a pair of four-over-one windows. The chimneys are comprised of a light-colored brick.
