42. Further Description of Important Interior and Exterior Features (Continued on Reverse if Necessary)
This side hallway house appears to have once been Greek Revival, but has undergone several changes, making it appear to be a Colonial Revival house. The original body of the house is centered at the front (east) elevation, and has added wings to its left and right. At the original body of the house, the door is at the left side and is flanked by pilasters, with an entablature above, giving the house its (likely original) Greek Revival appearance. Cement steps lead up to the wood door, which has sidelights, as well as a wood and glass storm door. To the right of the entry, a projecting bay has cutaway sides. The three windows in the bay are 9/9 and have pediments above them, with filled panels below. The second story has three 6/6 windows with shutters, and a vent is in the attic. The left wing, which is one story, has two 6/6 windows with shutters. At the right wing, the porch is enclosed. At the enclosed portion, a wood, shingled wall runs around the perimeter, with six screened-in, 1/1 windows above. Square posts sit at the corners of the porch. The north elevation has a single, 6/6 window at the first story of the wing, with a vent in the gable, flanked by continued...

43. History and Significance (Continue on Reverse if necessary)
This farmhouse is located just south of Hamilton Street, which was the town limit for many years. This makes it difficult to track residents in city records and telephone directories. Doyle. J. Jones and his wife Gail A. are the first known occupants of this home, according to city directory records, since 1971. Based on deed transfers and a vague address listing, it is possible that Andrew R. and Clara Johnston lived at this property prior to the Jones family. Doyle and Gail Jones are still currently the owners of this residence.

44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings (See #52)
Picket fence surrounds the rear yard. The garage is detached; it is modern, and has two car doors, as well as a pedestrian door to the right of the car doors. A 6/6 window is located to the right of the pedestrian door. A large historic English or Three Bay barn used to be situated on this property and was recently demolished. The barn was wood with asbestos shingles in its side gable roof. A third outbuilding is small, with side gables and historic windows. This building may have functioned as continued...

sidelights. At the original portion of the house, the far left and right sides of the second story have 6/6 windows. A pair of windows with six lights is at the right corner of the main body of the house. The first addition is one story and has an 8/8 window with shutters, as well as an exterior chimney that faces west. The rear addition has no windows. The south elevation is obscured, but at the right, the gabled one-story wing has a 6/6 window with shutters. To the left, the house extends out towards the rear and has a recessed porch with a wood balustrade and wood railing along the steps. There are windows within the porch. Three large windows are left of the porch, and at the far left, a door appears to be a modern door.
