This one-and-one-half story, three-bay bungalow features Craftsman elements. The addition of vinyl siding and vinyl windows on the first story may have obscured other Craftsman details. The foundation is made of sandstone, with the exception of rock-faced concrete blocks. The wooden floor of the porch. The entry projects out from the house. The wood door has eight lights and it also has sidelights. Paired casement windows flank the porch. Above the porch, at the attic, a set of three, likely original, wood windows are three-over-one double hung. The muntins divide the upper sash evenly into three vertical lights. A vent is in the gable. Exposed brackets have been covered in aluminum or vinyl siding.

The garage. The one-car garage has a gabled front and its car door is oriented slightly left of center. The elevation is flanked by two square windows. The south elevation has a projecting bay. At the north elevation, two large casement windows are at the far left and right. A one-over-one double hung window at the center of the elevation is flanked by two square windows. The south elevation has a projecting bay. Continued...

This small single-family house has had relatively long term residents for much of its history. Though its exact construction date is unknown, the house was standing by 1922. It was built on a lot where another house stood from the mid 1870s to the early 1910s. It was first occupied by Minnie Margaret Gladding (b. 1862) in 1929 after she moved to Oberlin moved from Cleveland, where she had been a teacher. Ms. Gladding remained in her house until 1943 and died in 1944. Daniel J. and Alene M. Born were the next occupants, moving in by 1944 and staying until at least 1948. They had two children, Betty and Richard. Daniel J. was a custodian for the Oberlin Public Library and also Cubmaster of the Oberlin Cub Scout Pack. By 1956, Leonard and Elizabeth M. Youngless (aka Younglas) were living... Continued...

Further Description of Important Interior and Exterior Features (Con’t)

The south side of the bay window has tripled casement windows. The cutaway sides have tall, narrow windows. On the remainder of the elevation, another tripled casement window is located right of center; a small one-over-one double hung window is to the far right. The center of the roof features a gabled dormer with paired three-over-one (likely historic) wood windows - these match the three-over-one windows in the attic level of the facade.

History and Significance (Con’t)

They had two sons and three daughters, but it is unknown how many of them also lived in 43 Park. Leonard was employed by T.O. Murphy Co., and later American Bridge as a mechanic and plumber. The family were also members of Sacred Heart Church. The Youngless family was listed in phone books until 1998. The resident/owner since 2003 has been Elizabeth Clerkin, Registrar of Oberlin College.
