This house has a Mediterranean flavor, with its symmetrical façade dominated by a colossal hooded stoop supported by two two-story Ionic columns covered in stucco. The gabled roof is parallel to the street, with another above it, and the sidelights of the front door echo this triplet effect. Under the trio of windows above them moldings to separate them from the stucco walls. The front door is flanked by a trio of windows on each side and another above it, and the sidelights of the front door echo this triplet effect. Under the trio of windows above the front door, there is an ornamental balcony with turned-wood balusters. The north side of the first floor has a screened-in porch supported by Ionic columns, and above the second floor there is a (cont.)
